

How do you know someone will be violent? (Terrible at predicting this)

What are things kids worry about after someone they have lived with was violent? (terrible judge of character, can't trust anyone, can't trust myself, world unsafe, can't trust own judgment)

How do kids feel when their caregiver's decisions result in something really scary happening?

How do caregivers make decisions? How do they think about the people that are allowed into their home?

Maybe a statement like "we know that there are lots of kids who have lived with someone who murdered"-

What is it like to live with someone who murders someone?

What kinds of things go through their minds when this happens?

What do they worry about?

How do you think this impacts how they feel about themselves, caregivers, the world?
